Italian singer Mariangela Demurtas has been part of Norwegian gothic metal band Tristania for over ten years and has released two albums with them. On 9th August she released an album with her new band Ardours, in which she partners up with Italian multi-instrumentalist and producer Kris Laurent. Mariangela has also worked on other projects, most recently with Timo Tolkki on his latest album.

Mariangela agreed to answer a few questions by e-mail to tell us more about Ardours and the new album "Last Place on Earth". You can read these below.

NI ROCKS: What's the story behind the name of the band? Mariangela Demurtas: It's a mix of different things, but the main idea is to create a sound that is both heavy and melodic. We have a lot of influences, from metal to rock to pop. We want to be able to play anything we want to. NI ROCKS: How long has the band been together? Mariangela Demurtas: We've been together for about five years now. It started as a joke, but it really took off. We've been playing live for a while now, and we're really enjoying it.
